

Old building just covered up existing problems.

The Park Hotel, New York, USA

11/23/2018

This hotel is right near everything that anyone new to New York may want to do. The hotel is kinda cool. Old looking on the outside and the lobby and bar have been updated nicely and there is a nice atmosphere there. The rooms were not as cool. When I first walked into my room it smelled like the people who had probably just checked out...bad. To remedy, I asked the nice housekeeper for some spray and she quickly went in and took care of the problem for me. She even adjusted the heat because she thought maybe the old heating system was circulating stagnant, old air. The bathroom was roomy but you could see water stains at the top of the shower and the vent in there was dirty. After I went to sleep I swear the room smelled a little like pee but I was done complaining for the night and now it really was just the air and maybe the carpet a bit. It looked ok but you can see that wallpaper had gone over shabby walls. The staff was really nice. They don't check people in until four so it was a nice surprise when they tried to accommodate me and they let me check in at noon. I was happy about that and they also gave me an apple. :) If you use this hotel just maybe inspect your room before finally settling down. They need some work but I wasn't that upset with it.

Reviewer: Violet Chambers